This book brings together scientific

evidence and experience relevant to the practical
conservation of bats.
The authors worked
with an international group of bat experts
and conservationists to develop a global list of interventions that could benefit bats. For each intervention, the book summarises
studies captured by the Conservation
Evidence project,
where that intervention
has been tested and its effects on bats quantified. The result is a thorough guide to what is known, or not known, about the
effectiveness of bat
conservation actions
throughout the world.
Bat Conservation is the fifth in a series of Synopsises that will cover different species
groups and habitats, gradually building into a comprehensive summary of evidence on the effects of conservation interventions for all biodiversity throughout the world. By making evidence accessible in this way, we hope to enable a change in the practice of conservation, so it can become more evidence-based. We also aim to highlight where there are gaps in knowledge. Evidence from all around the world is included. If there appears to be a bias towards evidence from northern European or North American temperate environments, this reflects a current bias in the published research that is available to us. Conservation interventions are grouped primarily according to the relevant direct threats, as defined in the International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN)'s Unified Classification of Direct Threats (www.iucnredlist.org/technical-documents/classification-schemes).
