
Cooperative Equity And Ownership

University Of Wisconsin

Capital Acquisition and Redemption Strategies for Cooperatives

News for Farmer Cooperatives

Proceedings of the Legal-Finance Conference for Wisconsin Cooperative Leaders

Capital Investments in Agricultural Marketing Cooperatives

Organizing Production Cooperatives

Building Cooperatives in California

Equity Redemption

General Report

Capital Formation in Co-operatives

Farmer Cooperatives

Effect of Alternative Financial and Capital Structures on Cooperative Growth and Progress

Equity Redemption Guide

Collective Courage

Agricultural Cooperatives

Community Capital
Equity Redemption Practices
Cooperatives at Work
Farmer Cooperatives
Agriculture rural development, and related agencies appropriations for 1987
Cooperative Research Report
Cooperative Ownership Compared to Other Business Arrangements for Closely-held
Joint Ventures
Keeping Cooperative Membership Rolls Current
ACS Research Report
Agricultural Cooperatives
American Cooperation
Cooperative Equity Retirement
Student Housing Cooperatives
Handbook of Research on Cooperatives and Mutuals
Co-operative Equity Capital : a Critical Problem for the Future
Rural Cooperatives
The Board of Directors of Cooperatives
Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1978
The Path to the Success of Cooperatives

An Economic and Legal Analysis of Farmer Cooperative Equity Capital Redemption Policies

Incentives and Equity Capital in Cooperatives

Starting an Agricultural Marketing Cooperative

Making Mondragón

Cooperatives

The Oxford Handbook of Mutual, Co-Operative, and Co-Owned Business

Mutual and Cooperative Enterprises

Cooperative Equity And Ownership University Of Wisconsin

Downloaded from <ftp.wtvq.com> by guest

BARTLETT LOGAN

Capital Acquisition and Redemption Strategies for Cooperatives Center for Policy Alternatives

Abstract: Member equity capital is a critical problem facing many cooperatives in Canada. Focusing on cooperatives (other than financial, services and housing), the author proposes that to access some sources of equity capital in the private and cooperative sectors that have not yet been tapped, coops will have to make some basic changes in their financial structure.

News for Farmer Cooperatives Edward Elgar Publishing

The genesis of this book dates back a number of years to an annual meeting of the American Institute of Cooperation. Cooperative leaders at that meeting openly expressed their feelings that they would like a much stronger commitment on the part of our land grant universities in particular and other educational institutions in general to creating a greater understanding of cooperatives and their role in our economy. Since I was in agreement with this position, the course in general group action which I was teaching was changed to emphasize the role of agricultural cooperatives. The need for a textbook designed to help in this emphasis became apparent. This book is the culmination of an effort to meet that need. This book has been prepared with the student and instructor in mind. It is based upon experience gained from many years of interaction with students in a classroom setting, in discussions with them after class hours, and after they had finished their degree requirements and had taken positions in industry, government, or elsewhere. While objectives of the book have remained relatively unchanged over time, the substance and format as means of meeting those objectives have changed from time to time as a result of these contacts and discussions. The input xiv Preface xv of students over the years as reflected in this product is gratefully acknowledged.

Proceedings of the Legal-Finance Conference for Wisconsin

Cooperative Leaders Springer Science & Business Media

Clifford Rosenthal provides a 10,000-foot overview and historical context of the community development credit union (CDCU) movement, while scrutinizing his journey as a white man leading a predominantly non-white organization. In his quest for community-controlled capital, he raised directly or indirectly through his advocacy for $100 million in investments in low-income credit unions; and pioneering the community development financial institutions (CDFI) movement. His 40-year career took Rosenthal from neighborhood co-op organizer, to credit union builder, then association president, and finally federal policymaker. Rosenthal writes as a credit union practitioner shaped by his training as a Russian historian and translator. More "co-conspirator" than ally, Rosenthal is a white man battling for capital and equity in communities of color, while acknowledging and confronting his own shortcomings as a leader. In contrast, Michael McCray gives a harrowing insider's account as a participant/eyewitness to history. McCray is a Black man fighting a federal regulator, the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA), in a white man's world. He brings "receipts"-- unique access to secret transcripts, doctored financial reports, and federal court documents which undergird a compelling argument that the regulator has mistreated small credit unions, especially in minority communities. McCray takes the reader behind closed doors at an NCUA board meeting and inside the courtroom as a small credit union fights for its life against federal attorneys and the Justice Department.

McCray delivers a dramatic first-person account with primary source documents and forensic insights on the landmark KAPFCU v NCUA federal court case. Justifiably jaundiced, McCray's compelling writing style takes the readers on an inside-the-car, roller-coaster ride through a regulatory "Alice in Wonderland." Rosenthal is a historian, and McCray is a whistleblower. Together, we guide the reader through a race-tinted, bifocal examination of the long and ongoing struggle to redress economic inequity. If we have succeeded, the reader will learn not only about the barriers to DEI-Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion-at the highest level of government, but gain a better understanding of the pivotal role Black organizations like the Divine Nine and Black churches play in bringing providing capital access to marginalized communities.

Capital Investments in Agricultural Marketing Cooperatives Penn State Press

1968- include Land-Grant University Conference on Farmers Cooperatives. [Papers].

Organizing Production Cooperatives Cornell University Press

The Oxford Handbook of Mutuals and Co-Owned Business investigates all types of 'member owned' organizations, whether consumer co-operatives, agricultural and producer co-operatives, worker co-operatives, mutual building societies, friendly societies, credit unions, solidarity organizations, mutual insurance companies, or employee-owned companies. Such organizations can be owned by their consumers, the producers, or the employees - whether through single-stakeholder or multi-stakeholder ownership. This complex set of organizations is named differently across countries: from 'mutual' in the UK, to 'solidarity cooperatives' in Latin America. In some countries, such organizations are not even officially recognized and thus lack a specific denomination. For the sake of clarity, this Handbook will refer to member-owned organizations to encompass the variety of non-investor-owned organizations, and in the national case study chapters the terms used will be those most widely employed in that country. These alternative corporate forms have emerged in a variety of economic sectors in almost all advanced economies since the time of the industrial revolution and the development of capitalism, through the subsequent creation and dominance of the limited liability company. Until recently, these organizations were generally regarded as a rather marginal component of the economy. However, over the past few years, member-owned organizations have come to be seen in some countries, at least, as potentially attractive in light of their ability to tackle various economic and social concerns, and their relative resilience during the financial and economic crises of 2007-2013.

Building Cooperatives in California

Saskatoon : Co-operative College of Canada

In Collective Courage, Jessica Gordon Nembhard chronicles African American cooperative business ownership and its place in the movements for Black civil rights and economic equality. Not since W. E. B. Du Bois's 1907 Economic Cooperation Among Negro Americans has there been a full-length, nationwide study of African American cooperatives. Collective Courage extends that story into the twenty-first century. Many of the players are well known in the history of the African American experience: Du Bois, A. Philip Randolph and the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Nannie Helen Burroughs, Fannie Lou Hamer, Ella Jo Baker, George Schuyler and the Young Negroes' Co-operative League, the Nation of Islam, and the Black Panther Party. Adding the cooperative movement to Black history results in a retelling of the African American experience, with an increased understanding of African American collective economic agency and grassroots economic organizing. To tell the story, Gordon Nembhard uses a variety of newspapers, period magazines, and journals; co-ops' articles of incorporation, minutes from annual meetings, newsletters, budgets, and income statements; and scholarly books, memoirs, and biographies. These sources reveal the achievements and challenges of Black co-ops, collective economic action, and social entrepreneurship. Gordon Nembhard finds that African Americans, as well as other people of color and low-income people, have benefitted greatly from cooperative ownership and democratic economic participation throughout the nation's history.

Equity Redemption Emerald Group Publishing

Cooperatives at Work presents a range of success stories in employee ownership and worker cooperative enterprise, showcasing how such firms can embody important and highly contested ideals of democracy, equity, and social transformation.

General Report Oxford University Press
This incisive Handbook provides a global update on the state of knowledge in cooperatives and mutuals, expertly describing future directions for research and education. Showcasing extensive discussions of cooperative theory, Matthew S. Elliott and Michael A. Boland, and the contributors, assess cooperatives' social, economic and environmental effects and analyse the impact of regional and cultural features that make cooperatives unique.

Capital Formation in Co-operatives
UP Press

Since its founding in 1956 in Spain's Basque region, the Mondragón Corporation has been a touchstone for the international cooperative movement. Its nearly three hundred companies and organizations span areas from finance to education. In its industrial sector Mondragón has had a rich experience over many years in manufacturing products as varied as furniture, kitchen equipment, machine tools, and electronic components and in printing, shipbuilding, and metal smelting. Making

Mondragón is a groundbreaking look at the history of worker ownership in the Spanish cooperative. First published in 1988, it remains the best source for those looking to glean a rich body of ideas for potential adaptation and implementation elsewhere from Mondragón's long and varied experience. This second edition, published in 1991, takes into account the major structural and strategic changes that were being implemented in 1990 to allow the enterprise to compete successfully in the European common market. Mondragón has created social inventions and developed social structures and social processes that have enabled it to overcome some of the major obstacles faced by other worker cooperatives in the past. William Foote

Whyte and Kathleen King Whyte describe the creation and evolution of the Mondragón cooperatives, how they have changed through decades of experience, and how they have struggled to maintain a balance between their social commitments and economic realities. The lessons of Mondragón apply most clearly to worker cooperatives and other employee-owned firms, but also extend to regional development and stimulating and supporting entrepreneurship, whatever the form of ownership.

Farmer Cooperatives Saskatoon : s.n.
Effect of Alternative Financial and Capital Structures on Cooperative Growth and Progress UCANR Publications
Equity Redemption Guide

Collective Courage
Agricultural Cooperatives
Community Capital
Equity Redemption Practices
Cooperatives at Work

Farmer Cooperatives
Agriculture rural development, and related agencies appropriations for 1987
Cooperative Research Report