In contemporary philosophy, substantive moral theories are typically classified as either consequentialist or deontological. Standard consequentialist theories insist, roughly, that agents must always act so as to produce the best available outcomes overall. Standard deontological theories, by contrast, maintain that there are some circumstances where one is permitted but not required to produce the best overall results, and still other circumstances in which one is positively forbidden to do so. Classical utilitarianism is the most familiar consequentialist view, but it is widely regarded as an inadequate account of morality. Although Professor Scheffler agrees with this assessment, he also believes that consequentialism seems initially plausible, and that there is a persistent air of paradox surrounding typical deontological views. In this book, therefore, he undertakes to reconsider the rejection of consequentialism. He argues that it is possible to provide a rationale for the view that agents need not always produce the best possible overall outcomes, and this motivates one departure from consequentialism; but he shows that it is surprisingly difficult to provide a satisfactory rationale for the view that there are times when agents must not produce the best possible overall outcomes. He goes on to argue for a hitherto neglected type of moral conception, according to which agents are always permitted, but not always required, to produce the best outcomes. Handbook of Student Skills Sprintprint Kalmbach Publishing, Co. Right from the start, the United States has been at the cutting edge of automotive design. Arranged chronologically, this colorful mini-reference provides an exciting guide to American engineering, from the 1914 Stutz Bearcat to the 1999 Rough Mustang. Accessible text provides historical context, and each entry has a side-, front-, or three-quarter-view photograph and a specification table with the year of manufacture and full technical details. Finding the Way 47North Space-faring ne'er-do-well Rex Nihlo tries to score his biggest payday yet by swindling both the Malarchian Empire and the Revolting Front, but he and his faithful robot sidekick might finally be in over their heads. The Cincinnati Doctors' Forum London : Heinemann

apologetic, Marney appeals to many of the world's great philosophers, theologians, poets, and novelists. He uses their arguments in defense of the Christian faith--the only organizing force which can bring order to a skeptic's world of chaos.
