Aliens have landed in New York. A deadly cloud of spores has already infected and killed the inhabitants of two worlds. Now the plague is heading for Earth, threatening humans and aliens alike. Can either species be trusted to find the cure? Geneticist Marianne Jenner is immersed in the desperate race to save humanity, yet her family is tearing itself apart. Siblings Elizabeth and Ryan are strident isolationists who agree only that an alien conspiracy is in play. Marianne's youngest, Noah, is a loner addicted to a drug that constantly changes his identity. But between the four Jenners, the course of human history will be forever altered. Earth's most elite scientists have ten months to prevent human extinction--but not everyone is willing to wait.

Have you ever felt like time is just slipping through your fingers and you don't even know where all the minutes and hours have gone? Or are you struggling to move your life in a positive direction but can't find traction? The 1000HOURS experiment was born out of a desire for change, the hope that positive traction can be found in an honest and unrelenting examination of how your time is spent, and asking yourself the right questions. In this raw and candid account of one thousand hours of his life, Anto Boghokian shares his struggles and insights, failures and successes. Most of all, Anto allows us to see an inward transformation that gradually builds, not to a climax or a turning point but to an awakening, a quickening, a friction point at which life genuinely begins to move forward and upward. 1000HOURS will help you find the grit to get into gear and go, never losing traction with down-to-earth reality. Get real, get woke, get moving forward. This book will help you do that.

registration trainees and hospital pre-registration tutors. Also available in this series: The Pre-registration Interview, Registration Exam Questions and MCQs in Pharmaceutical Calculations. Successful Learning in Pharmacy Developing Communication and Study Skills The Future of Nursing explores how nurses' roles, responsibilities, and education should change significantly to meet the increased demand for care that will be created by health care reform and to advance improvements in America's increasingly complex health system. At more than 3 million in number, nurses make up the single largest segment of the health care work force. They also spend the greatest amount of time in delivering patient care as a profession. Nurses therefore have valuable insights and unique abilities to contribute as partners with other health care professionals in improving the quality and safety of care as envisioned in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) enacted this year. Nurses should be fully engaged with other health professionals and assume leadership roles in redesigning care in the United States. To ensure its members are well-prepared, the profession should institute residency training for nurses, increase the percentage of nurses who attain a bachelor's degree to 80 percent by 2020, and double the number who pursue doctorates. Furthermore, regulatory and institutional obstacles -- including limits on nurses' scope of practice -- should be removed so that the health system can reap the full benefit of nurses' training, skills, and knowledge in patient care. In this book, the Institute of Medicine makes recommendations for an action-oriented blueprint for the future of nursing.

Regional health care databases are being established around the country with the goal of providing timely and useful information to policymakers, physicians, and patients. But their emergence is raising important and sometimes controversial questions about the collection, quality, and appropriate use of health care data. Based on experience with databases now in operation and in development, Health Data in the Information Age provides a clear set of guidelines and principles for exploiting the potential benefits of aggregated health data--without jeopardizing confidentiality. A panel of experts identifies characteristics of emerging health database organizations (HDOs). The committee explores how HDOs can maintain the quality of their data, what policies and practices they should adopt, how they can prepare for linkages with computer-based patient records, and how diverse groups from researchers to health care administrators might use aggregated data. Health Data in the Information Age offers frank analysis and guidelines that will be invaluable to anyone interested in the operation of health care databases. Leading Change, Advancing Health
